

Dr Sam Bateman retired from the RAN as a Commodore and is now a Professorial Research Fellow at the Australian National Centre for Ocean Resources and Security (ANCORS) at the University of Wollongong in Australia, and a Senior Fellow in the Maritime Security Programme at the S. Rajaratnam School of International Studies (RSIS) at the Nanyang Technological University in Singapore. His naval service included four ship commands ranging from a patrol boat to guided-missile destroyer. He was awarded his PhD from the University of NSW in 2001 for a dissertation on “The Strategic and Political Aspects of the Law of the Sea in East Asian Seas”. He has written extensively on defence and maritime issues in Australia, the Asia-Pacific and Indian Ocean. He has co-authored several reports for the Australian Strategic Policy Institute (ASPI), including Sea Change: Advancing Australia’s ocean interests (in 2009) and Our Western Front: Australia and the Indian Ocean (2010), as well as the Policy Paper Good Order at Sea in Southeast Asia – Policy Recommendations for RSIS (in 2009). Recent co-edited publications include Southeast Asia and the Rise of Chinese and Indian Naval Power: Between rising naval powers (2010), Security and International Politics in the South China Sea: Towards a Cooperative Management Regime (Routledge, 2009); and Lloyd’s MIU Handbook of Maritime Security (Auerbach Publications, 2009). He is a one-time recipient of the Shadwell Testimonial Prize awarded by the RN for high quality hydrographic survey work undertaken by a non-qualified surveyor.
