

Grant Boyes is a Senior Maritime Boundaries Adviser with Geoscience Australia in Canberra. He has 37 years experience in maritime boundaries, initially this was with the Australian Government; then in 1990, spent 10 years with a regional organisation in the Pacific; followed by 8 years as a consultant; before rejoining the Australian Government in 2008. In that time, he has advised and assisted 20 countries and several territories in the Pacific and South East Asian region on various aspects of maritime boundaries and offshore limits, including the negotiation of several delimitations between countries in the region.
