

Luiz Carlos Torres is a retired Brazilian Navy Hydrographer Officer and M.Sc. in Geology and Geophysics Marine. For the past 15 years, Luiz Torres has worked on a wide variety of multidisciplinary governmental and academic projects, such as: Brazilian Continental Shelf Outer limit Project, Brazilian Antarctic Projects; Safety of navigation on Brazilian waters and onboard adviser of geophysical surveys. He has participated on the presentation and discussions of the Brazilian submission continental shelf with the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf at UN from 2004 to 2007 as member of the Brazilian Delegation. He has attended ABLOS busyness meeting since 2007 as IHO Observer.

Hélio Villena Heringer is a graduate of Oceanography with Master Science Course in Marine Geology and Geophysics and Doctorate in Marine Geology. He is Professor of Oceanography in University of the State of Rio de Janeiro. He has worked as collaborator to the Brazilian Continental Shelf Project for a claim of the extended continental shelf under UNCLOS (United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea) since 2002.

Angela Alonso Rangel is a Captain from the Brazilian Navy. She graduated in engineer cartographer in 1981, Post Graduated in System Analysis in 1988 and Master Science in Geology and Geophysics Marine in 1998. She had worked at the Directorate of Hydrography and Navigation for more than 20 years. She has worked Command of Naval Operations and General Directorate of Navigation in the last 5 years and she has been working at the Brazilian Continental Shelf Project for a claim of the extended continental shelf under UNCLOS (United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea) since 1989. She has participated on the presentation and discussions of the Brazilian submission continental shelf with the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf at UN during 2004-2007, as a member of the Brazilian Delegation.